LINES

Inscribed by a friend, to the memory of the late hon. THOMAS P. GROSVENOR, deceased.

Lamented Grosvenor! to the grave Thy manly form is early borne; E'en now o'er thee the grass doth wave,
And spring, midst all her sweetness, mourn!

The summer breeze shall linger there,
And nature spread her fairest bloom,
And dewy evening nurse with care The bow's around thy rural tomb.
There pious friendship pensive led,
To thee shall pay the frequent tear—There truth and virtue silent tread, And bend in sacred sorrow near.

Serene and peaceful be his rest Who every generous passion felt;
And light the earth upon that breast Where pure and spotless honor dwelt.

Oh! could affection claim the pow'r To stay the fatal dart of death;
She had not known this mournful hour, But still preserv'd thy val'd breath.

Fied is the genius oft display'd In aid of truth and virtue's laws;
And mute the eloquence that away'd Resistless in thy country's cause!

The chilling earth that form conceals, So late with freedom's spirit fir'd; And blighted hope her grief reveals O'er all that youth and age admir'd.

To cheer thy path and guide thy mind, Religion pour'd her holy flame;
And, midst her beams, thy worth refin'd Shines brighter on the roll of fame!

While thy free spirit mounts the skies, Thou leave'st a fair example here:
To those who virtuous fame may prize, Thy honor'd name will long be dear.

Thy last and dreamless sleep be calm!
Still in the hour devote to thought, Thou oft the languid scene shall charm, By fancy's magic influence brought.

To the editor of the Richmond Compiler.

The following is so majestically grand, and awfully sublime, infinitely transcending the ordinary discourses on the subject, that I doubt not you will judge it worthy of a place in your columns:

"The two preceding chapters" are certainly among the most important and the most sublime in the New Testament. The general judgement, the resurrection of the body and the states of the quick and the dead, the unwritten and the just, are described concisely indeed; but they are exhibited in the most striking and affecting points of view. I have attempted little else than verbal illustrations: the subject is too vast for my comprehension—I cannot order my speech by reason of darkness—I though there are some topics headed here which do not appear in other parts of the sacred writtings—yet the main of what we learn is this:—Our God will come and will not keep silence. A fire shall burn before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the Heavens above and to the Earth beneath, that he may judge his people the day of judgment! What an awful word is this!

What a truly terrific time! when the Heavens shall be shiv'led as a scroll, and the elements melt with fervent heat!

When the earth and its appendages shall be burnt, and the fury of the conflagration be such, that there shall be no more sea! A time when the noble and ignoble dead, the small and the great shall stand before God, and shall be judged according to the deeds done in the body. Yea, a time when the thoughts of the heart, and every secret thing, shall be brought to light! When the innumerable millions of transgressions in embryo, and abortive sins, shall be exhibited in all their purposes and intents! A time, when Justice —Eternal justice, shall sit alone upon the throne, and pronounce a sentence, as impartial as irrevocable; and as awful as eternal! There is a term of human life; and every human being is rapidly gliding to it, as fast as the wings of Time, in their onward motion incomprehensible swift, can carry him!—

And shall not the living lay this to heart? Should we not live in order to be judged? And, should we not live and die, so as to live again to all Eternity:

not with Satan and his angels, but with God and his saints?—O! thou man of God! thou Christian, thou immortal spirit, think of these things!

* Dr. Clarke's concluding observations on the last chapter of 1 Thessalonians.

Wm. Penn on Marriage.—Do thou be wise; prefer the person, virtue before beauty, the mind before the body; thou thou hast a wife, a friend, a companion,

LONDON, March 15.
BONAPARTE.

The memorial in the shape of a letter to Sir Hudson Lowe, of which we yesterday laid a copy before our readers, has been published in a pamphlet with some prefatory remarks by M.
Santini, who calls himself "Monsieur du Cabinet de l'Empereur," from which the following are extracts:—

"I am a native of the Island of Corsica: at the age of eighteen I entered the military service in the battalion of Corsican sharpshooters. I was present at the battles of Ulm, Austerlitz, Jena, Prussian Eylau, Friedland, Ratisbon, Eckmuhl, As-pern, Ypersberg, and finally, at the battle of Polask; after which I quitted the profession of a soldier for that of a Courier. When the Emperor departed from Fontainebleau for the Island of Elba, I determined on following him, without feeling any concern about the rank in which I might continue my services. A short time after our arrival, I was presented to the Emperor. He recognized an old soldier who had never failed in the fulfilment of his duty: and had the goodness to grant me the place of Messenger to his cabinet, and Keeper of his Port Folio. I returned to France in 1815, in the suite of the Emperor; and after the Battle of Waterloo, I accompanied him to Rochefort, and on board the English ship the Bellerophon. Finally, I was one of the few faithful servants of his Majesty, who had the happiness to follow him to St. Helena, where, for nearly a year, I served near his person.

The emperor on his arrival, resided in the house of a merchant named Balcombe, where he remained for about two months. Mr. Balcombe's house was neither suitable nor convenient; but for this, Sir George Cockburn was in no way blameable. On every occasion he endeavoured to conciliate the duties of his office, with the respect and delicacy which were due to the rank and misfortunes of his august prisoner. From thence the Emperor was transferred to Longwood, which was once a farm belonging to the East India company. In this wretched asylum he still remains.
His sleeping chamber is scarcely large enough to contain a bed and a few chairs. The roof of this hovel consists of paper, coated with pitch, which is beginning to rot, & through which the rain water and dew penetrate. In addition to all these inconveniences, the house is infested by rats, who destroy every thing they can reach. All the Emperor's linen, even that which was lately sent from England, has been gnawed and completely destroyed by them. For want of clothes, the linen was necessarily exposed upon the floor. When the emperor is at dinner the rats run about the apartment, and even creep between his feet.

The report of a house having been built for the emperor, which, it has been said, was sent from England, is entirely false. Some pieces of timber work have, indeed, arrived, but the governor declared that a house cannot be built in less than three or four years.

When the emperor was established at Longwood, Sir G. Cockburn introduced the most exact economy into every branch of the expenditure. The emperor, however, never wanted what was necessary, and the Admiral always took care that nothing should be refused which, with the due regard to locality, the person of the emperor, and his duty, was indispensable.

It is not, however, economy, which the new Governor has introduced into the household of the emperor; it is absolute want.

It is to be recollected the Governor took upon himself the entire charge of the maintenance of Napoleon and his suite; but the provisions he furnished were always in too small a quantity, and also very often of bad quality. In the latter case, when the emperor's house-steward (Cypriani) has found himself under the necessity of sending back the provisions, the articles were never replaced by others more fit for use, and it has been necessary to wait until the following day for a supply.

It has often happened that, on finding himself without any butcher's meat for the emperor's table, the steward has sent me to purchase a beef, for which I have paid four guineas; and often could only procure pork for making soup.

Captain Poppleton, of the 53d regiment, appointed to guard the emperor, if he is the man of honour I believe him to be, will not fail to bear witness that he has often lent candles to lighten this abode of desolation, as well as bread, butter, poultry, and even salt. I was even, from necessity, in the habit of repairing secretly to the English camp to procure butter eggs and bread, of the soldiers' wives, otherwise the Emperor would often have been without breakfast, & even without dinner.

The gov. sent seven servants to Longwood, but the emperor was obliged to dismiss four of them from inability to supply them with food! on which the gov. granted soldiers' rations to the three that remained.

Often has it also happened that Cy-priani, the steward, has purchased from these three servants the rations of bread they received from the camp, in consequence of the want of provisions for the emperor and his suite, which had not arrived.

It is a fact which will appear incredible, but which is not less true, that the Emperor is limited a bottle of wine per day. Marshal and Madame Bertrand, gen. Montholon and his lady, General Gouraud and Count Las Casas, have also each their bottle.

Marshal Bertrand has 3 children, M. de Las Casas one, about 15 or 16 years old; and for all these mouths the Governor allows no rations.

In this state of things, the emperor has been compelled to sell all his plate to procure the first necessities of life! I myself broke it in pieces before it was sent to market. The produce of the sale was deposited by order of the governor, in the hands of Mr. Balcombe, and the emperor was not permitted to touch a single penny.

When the house steward, wishing to supply the deficiency of the provisions furnished by the Gov. makes purchases himself, which happens every day, he can only pay them by orders upon Mr. Balcombe.

I used to rise at day break, & when I did not succeed in shooting a few pigeons in the neighbourhood of our dwelling, the emperor had frequently nothing for breakfast. The provisions did not reach Longwood until 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon; & then they were of so bad a quality that the house-steward had to send them back, the Emperor subsisting entirely on the produce of my shooting. On these occasions the cook thought himself fortunate in having brought from Paris some portable cakes, with which he made soup for the emperor.

There is no water fit for cooking at Longwood. Very good water may however, be procured at a distance of 1,200 yards, and might be conveyed to the emperor's barracks at an expense of from 12 to 1500 francs.

The house is supplied by water which is brought from this fountain; it is open only once during the day; at all other times is locked.—It is guarded by an English officer, who is scarcely ever present when water is wanted. There is a conduit for conveying water to the English camp; but it is thought unnecessary to do as much for the unfortunate Napoleon.

I spare the great and numerous English nation a picture of the other insults and humiliations to which the emperor is exposed, and also a further detail of the complaints, which the emperor makes against the Gov.
Sir Hudson Lowe. I shall confine myself to observing, that at the last visit the Gov. made to Longwood, and at which I was present, he offended to such a degree that the emperor said, "Have you not then done with insulting me! Leave my presence, & let me never see you again, unless you have received orders from your government to assassinate me, you will then find me ready to lay open my breast to you. My person is in your power. You may shed my blood."

The climate of Longwood is, besides, most unhealthy, every thing is there in extremes—the humidity, the wind and the heat.

Admiral Cockburn had marked out a circuit of two leagues for the Emperor's promenade: the present Governor has, without any motive, abridged it to half a league.

The inconvenience of the climate of Longwood, and particularly the humidity to which the emperor is exposed, have considerably injured his health; and it is the opinion of his English physician, that he cannot remain there another year without hazarding his life.

Colonel Poniatowski has been removed from the Island by the order of the governor.

We departed from St. Helena on the 28th of October on board the English frigate the Orontes, and after having sailed to the Cape of Good Hope, we again returned to St. Helena. There we remained for several days without being suffered to land.
The emperor having been informed of our return, caused some provisions to be purchased at James-town for our voyage to England, which were sent on board the vessel. We were however, under the necessity of sending back the live stock, as the captain insisted on our killing it immediately.

As for wine, we never tasted it during the voyage, as we would not submit to have the emperor's present, which was strictly our own, distributed to us in rations by the captain.

On the 24th of February we arrived at Portsmouth, from whence I proceeded to London, to fulfil the painful but sacred duty which I now discharge by the publication of this narrative."

LONDON, March 15.
The resolutions moved on Tuesday last in the house of lords, by earl Grosvenor, were to the following effect.

1. That is the opinion of this house that all sinecures in the patronage of the crown ought to be abolished after the expiration of the subsisting interest.

2. That all useless places should be abolished or regulated forthwith.

3. That for the future no places should be granted by the crown in reversion, as tending to prolong and perpetuate useless offices, and to render inadequate the discharges of those to which active duties are an-nexed.

4. That it is more especially the duty of the house to adopt the foregoing resolutions at a period of unusual difficulty and distress, and of universal petition for economical reform and retrenchment.

VERY LATE FROM ENGLAND.
[Per the Galen, arrived at Boston.]

The meeting at Spa-Fields was adjourning to the 24th March, on which day but a few sailors only assembled, and nothing was done.

Mr. Brongham stated in Parliament, March 27, that they were 370, 000 persons in great misery in and near Birmingham, but they evinced no disposition for disorder.

The bill to prevent seditious meetings is nearly completed. One clause forbids any popular meetings within one mile of Westminster Hall, during the session of Parliament or a court. The duke of Sussex and lord Erskine opposed the bill. It was said ministers intended to prolong the suspension of the habeas corpus act beyond the period now fixed.

The British are about to allow of the exportation of salt, duty free, for the fisheries, and to lay a duty of Lord Cochrane is preparing for a voyage to South America. He has advertised for a loan of 10,000l. for for the bar.

A new law of exchange has been France must be demanded within six months from date, or pain of forfeit-

Mexico.—But they must be smuggled.

From the N. Y. Evn. Post, April 28.
GENERAL LALLEMAND.

We learn from a correct source that Gen. Lallemand, late of the F. imperial army, arrived at Boston last Thursday, in the ship Triton, from Liverpool under the assumed name of Gen. Cotting, and took up his lodgings at the Exchange Coffee House. He accompanied Bonaparte in his flight from Paris to Rochefort, after the battle of Waterloo, & was employed by him to negotiate with capt. Maitland, of the British ship Bellerophon, to receive them on board. On his arrival off England he was refused permission by the British government to accompany Bonaparte to St. Helena, and was sent with Marshal Savary, to Smyrna.

From Smyrna, he took private passage in a British merchantman to England, was landed at a bye-port, travelled on foot to Liverpool, and was literally smuggled on board the Triton. On leaving the river, as the Custom House boat passed from ship to ship to examine the rolls, the Gen. was passed in a boat to and from several ships, so as to evade the boarding officer. Our informant adds, he appears to be a man of great address and polished manners, his person of middling size, and an intelligent frank countenance. In the last French Imperial Court Callender he had the title of Baron.

William Cobbett did not arrive in the ship Pacific, on Saturday, as stated in our last; but is momentarily expected, having taken his passage in the ship Importer, capt. Ogden, that sailed in company with the Pacific.
The arm of the British Government has been so strengthened by the suspensions of the habeas corpus act, that the trade of patriotism no longer thrives. We should not be surprised if Tandem Hunt, and other accomplices, should follow him in a short time.
Their sport is all spoiled. A meeting was called at Spa-Fields on the 24th of March, and the deluded popular collected in considerable numbers, but there being no orator to influence their minds by intemperate harangues, they soon dispersed. The idea of being exposed upon a gibbet, has had an astonishing effect upon their nerves, sealed their mouths and stopped their pens. A man was taken up in London for hawking about Cobbett's last Register, containing seditious matter, and fined 10l. From this circumstance, it is probable Cobbett has taken the hint, and thinking his turn might come next, when he might be called on for something more than a fine, has taken himself off.

From a late London paper.

Mr. Lockhart and Mr. Cobbett—A most curious and edifying correspondence has taken place between Mr. Cobbett and Mr. Lockhart, M. P. in consequence of the former having asserted at the Hampshire meeting, that the latter had made the foulest misrepresentation that was ever made by mortal man. Mr.
Lockhart followed Mr. Cobbett to his inn, and wished, in the presence of witnesses, to call for an explanation. Then Mr.
Cobbett said, his demand must be made in writing. Accordingly, the following correspondence took place:

Sir—As you requested me to put in writing the object of my requesting a meeting with you, I beg to inform you it was with a view to your retracting the word fool, which you applied to me, by stating I "had been guilty of a foul misrepresentation" I did not hear whether you said "of your language or intention."

I am, sir,
Your obedient servant,
J. J. LOCKHART.

Winchester, 11th March, 1817.
Sir—I did not say that it was "a foul misrepresentation," which you made, but "the foulest misrepresentation that ever was made by mortal man," an opinion which I still entertain, and always shall, until you shall fully express your sorrow for the effects of that mortification, which, I hope, led your tongue beyond the cool dictates of your mind.

I am, sir,
Your most humble,
And most obedient serv't.

WM. COBBETT.

March 11, 1817.

Sir—I have received your answer, which leaves no alternative, except that of my insisting on that satisfaction which you owe me as a gentleman, and which I wish you would empower some friend to arrange this evening.

I am, sir,
your obedient servant,

J. J. LOCKHART.
I shall remain in Winchester this evening for this purpose, until 8 o'clock, and a friend will deliver this letter to you to accept your arrangement.

Winchester, 11th March, 1817.

Sir—If I could stay here another day, I would amuse myself with some man with you, but having business of more importance on hand, I must beg of you to renew your pleasant correspondence, upon our arrival in town. In the mean while, I remain,
Your most obedient.

And most humble servant,
WM. COBBETT.

To these letters, Mr. Cobbett, in his Journal of this day, adds the following explanation of his own motives for accepting the challenge:

"Now, my good neighbors, a few plain facts will enable you to form a perfect correct judgment of this man's conduct and character. First, he knew that I had written many essays, reproaching, in the strongest terms, the practices of duelling.
Second, he knew that I had held it as a species of suicide, for a man, in my situation, to fight a duel, seeing, that if one missed me, another would be found, to do some one should hit me. Third (and this was his rock of safety) he knew well that if I accepted of his challenge, I must instantly forfeit five thousand pounds sterling. He knew this well, for he, who is a lawyer, mind, knew that I had been bound in recognizance for seven years from the year 1812—This was his safeguard! You often hear of people, who are going to fight duels, taken before magistrates, and bound over. That puts an end to the affair.—But he knew and well knew, that I was bound over before hand, and in a monstrous and ruinous sum, and, when you are told, that he brought two witnesses with him, you will easily guess what were his real intentions.
When men mean to fight, they go to a very different way. They send polished manners, his person of middling size, and an intelligent countenance. In the last French Imperial Court, Callender held the title of Baron.

William Cobbett did not arrive in ship Pacific, on Saturday, as stated in our last; but is momentarily expected, having taken his passage in ship Importer, capt. Ogden, that sailed in company with the Pacific. The arm of the British Government has been so strengthened by the suspensions of the habeas corpus act, at the trade of patriotism no longer lives. We should not be surprised if Fanden Hunt, and other accomplices, should follow him in a short time. Their sport is all spoiled. A meeting was called at Spa-Fields on the 14th of March, and the deluded populace collected in considerable numbers, but there being no orator to influence their minds by intemperate harangues, they soon dispersed. The sea of being exposed upon a gibbet, had an astonishing effect upon their nerves, sealed their mouths and stopped their pens. A man was taken up in London for hawking about Cobbett's last Register, containing seditious matter, and fined 10*l*. From this circumstance, it is probable Cobbett has taken the hint, and thinking his turn might come next, when he might be called on for something more than a fine, has taken himself to bed.

From a late London paper.
Mr. Lockhart and Mr. Cobbett—A most curious and edifying correspondence has taken place between Mr. Cobbett and Mr. Lockhart, M. P. in consequence of the former having asserted at the Hampshire meeting, that the latter had made the foulest misrepresentation that was ever made by mortal man. Mr. Lockhart followed Mr. Cobbett to his inn, and wished, in the presence of witnesses, call for an explanation. Then Mr. Cobbett said, his demand must be made in writing. Accordingly, the following correspondence took place:

Sir—As you requested me to put in writing the object of my requesting a meeting with you, I beg to inform you it was with a view to your retracting the word foul, which you applied to me, by stating I "had been guilty of a foul misrepresentation." I did not hear whether you said "of your language or intention."

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
J. J. LOCKHART.

Winchester, 11th March, 1817.
Sir—I did not say that it was a "foul misrepresentation," which you made, at the foulest misrepresentation that ever was made by mortal man? an opinion which I still entertain, and always will, until you fully express your sorrow for the effects of that mortification, which I hope, led your tongue beyond the cool dictates of your mind.

I am, Sir,
Your most humble,
And most obedient serv't.

March 11, 1817.

Sir—I have received your answer, which leaves no alternative, except that I may insist on that satisfaction which you owe me as a gentleman, and which I wish you would empower some friend to arrange this evening.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
J. J. LOCKHART.

I shall remain in Winchester this evening for this purpose, until 8 o'clock, and my friend will deliver this letter to you to accept your arrangement.

Winchester, 11th March, 1817.

Sir—I could say here another day, would amuse myself with some man with you, but having business of more importance on hand, I must beg of you to renew your pleasant correspondence, upon our arrival in town. In the mean while, I remain, Your most obedient,
And most humble servant,
WM. COBBETT.

To these letters, Mr. Cobbett, in his journal of this day, adds the following explanation of his own motives for seeking the challenge:

"Now, my good neighbors, a few plain facts will enable you to form a perfectly correct judgment of this man's conduct and character. First, he knew that I had written many essays, reproaching in the strongest terms, the practice of duelling. Second, he knew that I had held it as a species of suicide, for a man, in my situation, to fight a duel, seeing, that, if one missed me, another would be found, and some one should hit me. Third (and this was his rock of safety) he knew well that if I accepted of his challenge, I must instantly forfeit five thousand pounds sterling. He knew this well, for he, who is a lawyer, mind, knew that I had been bound in recognizance for seven years from the year 1812—This was his safeguard! You often hear of people, who are going to fight duels, taken before magistrates, and bound over. That puts an end to the affair. But he knew, and we knew, that I was bound over before hand, and in a monstrous and ruinous sum, and, when you are told, that he brought two witnesses with him, you will easily guess what were his real intentions. When men mean to fight, they go to work in a very different way. They send single friend to tell the party of it in a whisper. They do not go to the party and take two witnesses with them. They do not run blustering about and making a great noise; and, my real belief is, that if I had done any thing, which would have amounted to a breach of the peace, I had accepted a challenge, and had appointed a time to fight; Lockhart the brave would have taken care, that this breach of the peace should have cost me five thousand pounds! This is my belief; but you have the facts before you, and I leave you to judge for yourselves."

ALEXANDRIA: MONDAY, MAY 5, 1817.

Every man who feels a pleasure in contemplating the spectacle of a nation enjoying uninterrupted freedom, must be grieved at the suspension of the Habeas Corpus in England. Although we have (thanks be to God, and under him to our virtuous and intrepid fathers, for it) nothing to do with that concern as regarding ourselves, we do really regret it, and condemn its authors. We regret that the necessity for such a violent encroachment on the British constitution should exist, and, viewing the turbulent scribblers, orators, and incendiaries who goaded the ignorant, unthinking multitude into madness, about a scarcity which no human power could prevent or remedy, as the real authors of it, we heartily condemn them.—It is some consolation however to reflect that the suspension was the work of the legislative body of that country, on mature deliberation, founded on at least a plausible ground of necessity. Say what men will to the contrary, it must be acknowledged that our democratic patriots in this country shew a becoming and dutiful fondness for the country of their ancestors; else they could not exhibit a zeal and vigilance over its interests so much greater than what they manifested for their own, upon an occasion which differed from the present encroachment in Britain, only in being much worse, and without any just foundation. The miserable, ill advised, stupid, crude attempt of Burr, can hardly be put in comparison with the dangers in Britain; and old Satan himself will not say that the parliament of England is not rather more competent than General Wilkinson to judge whether the constitution should or should not be suspended. Yet, that suspension of our Habeas Corpus by military force, though abused by Wilkinson most grossly in the exercise of it, was received with great complacency and approving silence by those who at the time monopolized the whole patriotism of the country to themselves.

Were we interested in the concerns of England, we should certainly unite with those who reprobate the conduct of the present ministers of that country. They have a hard game to play, no doubt; but they play it most execrably. It would seem as if they were afflicted with an obliquity of mental vision which prevented them from moving in a straight line to any object. They are so oppressed with the incumbrances incident to the maintenance of influence in parliament, and enslaved by their revenues, that they cannot govern with rectitude. Sir Hudson Lowe, the governor of St. Helena, is an instance. His conduct to Bonaparte as described by SARTRE, is abominable.—Doctor Warden's mention of Lowe, naturally prepares one to believe that description; and no one of common sense can imagine that the regent or his ministers, bad as the latter are, would authorize cruelty and persecution to a fallen man when they were bound to protect and render as comfortable as the necessity of the case would admit. The anxiety shewn before Lowe's arrival to render the unhappy man tranquil, shews that the ill usage of which he complains could not be authorised by the cabinet—but let it originate where it may, it is unpardonable and unlike the British character.—We always wished for, and we rejoiced at the fall of Napoleon, because while in power he was an emphatical evil to the world—but his being fallen entitles him to pity and protection. To insult him now, is an act of cowardice as well as cruelty, such as no man who really possessed the generosity of a true Briton, as Britons once were, could commit; and such as we do believe none are capable of but the lowest vermin, who are incessantly on the strain to do some officious service neither desired, expected or approved, in order to wriggle themselves into favor with some patronizing satellite of the crown. If the governor of St. Helena be a Briton, he is indeed what his name announces, a Low one.—If he does not clear himself of a part of the charge against him, we shall hold him to be not merely Lowe, but Lowest.

The American people will receive more substantial information of the true state of the British cabinet, from the speech of the Marquis of Wellesley, than from all the speeches and writings on both sides taken together.

Extract of a letter dated Pernambuco, 13th March, to Mr. Seeborn, Balt.

The revolution commenced on the 6th instant, about 2 o'clock, P. M. in the barracks just by our house, and at 5 o'clock all was quiet. This thing has been in contemplation a number of years, and was so organized as to have taken place throughout the Brazils about three months hence, on the birth day of one of the Princes of Portugal, when all the troops would be under arms for the celebration, but accidentally it leaked out in this place, and about 60 of the head patriots were proscribed by the government here, and they had actually seized Domingo Jose Martin (whom you know) and put in prison. The other conspirators, who were not taken, did not know that their names were on the proscribed list; when on the 6th inst. the governor ordered the adjutant of orders to read to their regiment on duty the names of those persons. The adjutant, while in the act of his duty, read the name of an officer who was standing close by him, and who immediately drew his sword and ran it through the adjutant. Thus commenced the revolution of the Brazils; nothing but liberty was the word, and it vibrated from bosom to bosom. Immediately on the officer being killed, a part of the officers and soldiers erected their standard of liberty; and the word was passed, to which party do you belong, but almost all answering we are patriots, little blood was shed. The confusion, however, was very great at first, as the bulk of the people did not know the cause of the fighting. You will recollect the younger brother of Martin. When this gentleman heard that hostilities had commenced, he immediately went alone to the prison where his brother was confined, and presenting his pistols ordered him to be liberated, which the jailer complied with. Martin then seized a sword, ordered his friends to follow him and he would give their country liberty. The cannon planted on the bridge were fired but a few times. The governor made his escape to Fort Brum, but his soldiers immediately delivered him and the fort up to the patriots. They embarked him in a schooner for Rio de Janeiro, with a new flag flying at the main, which is at present white, but probably will be altered. The next day the congress assembled at the old palace, and all embraced as brethren.

Charleston, April 26.
A gentleman of vivacity and respectability, recently from Savannah, informs us that on Sunday last, he was on board the Buenos Ayrean privateer Brig Invincible, captain Jewett, at anchor on Tybee.

Captain J. stated to him, that during a late cruise on the coast of Cuba, boats full of people frequently came off to him in the night, bringing fresh provisions; and expressed their wishes for the success of the Revolutionary cause. They were fearful of communicating with vessels under the independent flag openly, as it might excite suspicion in the rulers.—Captain J. gave it as his opinion, that in less than twelve months time, the whole island of Cuba would throw off the legitimate yoke of Ferdinand.

We understand that a company of the U. S. Artillery will be immediately ordered from the garrison of this harbor to the frontiers of Georgia, to aid in chastising the hostile Creek Indians.

Forty Dollars Reward.
Ran away on or about the 25th of December last, from the subscriber, living in Middleburg, Loudoun county, Va. a black man named Daniel, or Daniel Fisher, (formerly belonging to the estate of Thomas Nolan, dec'd) about 38 years of age, 5 feet 10 or 11 inches high, stout made, speaks slow and full, and has a large scar on one of his feet occasioned by a cut. He had on and took with him a blue coat and pantaloons, fur red hat, and shoes and other clothes not particularly known. He was hired in Waterford during the last year and I understand had liberty to hire himself about. He is a very good hand in a brick yard and is tolerable good shoemaker. It is probable he has engaged himself in one of the above trades. He mentioned when he left Waterford that he should go to Harper's Ferry and commence boating, having obtained my leave to do so. Whilst at Waterford he lived in the house of a free negro, and it is highly probable he has procured a pass from some of them, to suit his purpose. He has a mother living in the neighborhood of the Little Falls, belonging to the Dulaney estate. The above reward will be given to any person who will deliver him to me, or secure him in any jail so that I get him again.

The Paradise of Coquettes,
A POEM, in nine Parts. A second edition of this elegant Poem is just published, and for sale by the Subscribers.
The character of this Poem is thus given by the Quarterly and Edinburgh Reviews—

The Paradise of Coquettes:
The character in which the poet professes to speak, is that of the POET OF WOMAN. He is supposed to be addressing woman, and woman only, and addressing her, on adventures of which she is the heroine, and on charms and graces, which it is the whole history of her beauty to have exercised with failure or success.
His incontestable merits, and the assiduous care which he has bestowed upon the poem, deserve the warmest praise.
Quarterly Review, Oct. 1814.
We have here a little volume which may be fairly regarded as a prodigy in this age of quarto ballads, romances, heroics, and sentimental simplicity. It is by far the best and most brilliant imitation of Pope, that has appeared since the time of that great writer; with all his point, polish, and nicely-balanced versification, as well as his sarcasm and witty malice. He is always at home—always lively and entertaining.
His satire is polished and yet pungent. His versification, in particular, is almost invariably flowing & harmonious.
Edinburgh Review, Feb. 1815.
"A vein of polite irony runs through the 'Paradise of Coquettes' which was familiar to the writers of the age of Anne and George the First, but has been discarded in making other modern improvements, by our contemporaries."
James Kennedy & Son.
